Love is patient. I don't have to have everything just the way I want it right now. I give people plenty of time to accomplish tasks or understand what I'm saying.
Love is kind. I look for the best in other people and try to build them up rather than put them down.
Love does not envy. I'm happy with who I am and what I have. I'm happy for someone else who has something I don't have, even if I'd like very much to have it.
Love does not boast. I don't brag constantly about my accomplishments, abilities, or possessions, but I'm quick to congratulate others on their accomplishments.
Love is not proud. I'm willing to be friends with all kinds of people. I'm not afraid to make the first move in a friendship. When I've hurt someone, I'm willing to admit I was wrong.
Love is not rude. I treat others with the same respect I'd want.
Love is not self-seeking. I don't always put myself first. I'm aware of and considerate of the needs of others.
Love is not easily angered. It takes something really big to make me angry. I don't "fly off the handle" over little things.
Love keeps no record of wrongs. I find it easy to forgive others. I look for the positive things that happen in my relationships rather than the negative.
